The Code of Professional Conduct for Teachers published by the Teaching Council in accordance with section 7(2)(b) of the Teaching Council Act, 2001

Foreword

The role of the Teaching Council is to regulate the teaching profession and the professional conduct of teachers, to establish and promote professional standards, to support the continuing professional development of teachers and to promote teaching as a profession. Its establishment in 2006 represented a milestone in the development of teaching as a profession in Ireland, and had been advocated for by many in the teaching profession over several decades.

Today, there are almost 73,000 registered teachers in Ireland, serving education at primary, post-primary and further education levels. With more than 4,000 schools involving close to a million pupils/students, the contribution which the teaching profession makes to society is significant. Having a well-established tradition of service in Ireland, the profession enjoys high levels of public confidence and trust as evidenced by research undertaken by the Teaching Council in 2009.

Among the many important developments initiated in recent years to strengthen and underpin teaching in Ireland was the adoption of the Codes of Professional Conduct for Teachers in 2007. This was done in accordance with Section 7(2)(b) of the Teaching Council Act, 2001 which provides that the Council shall “establish, publish, review and maintain codes of professional conduct for teachers, which shall include standards of teaching, knowledge, skill and competence”.

The Council made a commitment to review the 2007 Codes within a period of three to four years. Initiating the review in 2009, the Council took account of a number of developments in the intervening years including the publication of the Teaching Council [Registration] Regulations, 2009 and the Council’s Policy on the Continuum of Teacher Education. A revised Draft Code issued in 2011 and was the subject of an extensive consultation process with education partners and stakeholders, including the general public, teachers and interested bodies. The Teaching Council has taken careful account of all the submissions and observations provided and has now approved the Code of Professional Conduct for Teachers (2nd Edition) in accordance with the requirements of the Teaching Council Act, 2001.

The Teaching Council is committed to ensuring that the Code of Professional Conduct for Teachers is promoted and observed so as to maintain public trust and confidence in the teaching profession.

Introduction

The teaching profession has a distinguished record of service in Ireland. This Code of Professional Conduct for Teachers reiterates and makes explicit the values and standards that have long been experienced by pupils/students through their participation in education.

Purpose of the Code

The Code of Professional Conduct for Teachers applies to all registered teachers.

Its purpose is threefold:

1. It serves as a guiding compass as teachers seek to steer an ethical and respectful course through their career in teaching and to uphold the honour and dignity of the teaching profession.
2. It may be used by the education community and the wider public to inform their understanding and expectations of the teaching profession in Ireland.
3. It has an important legal standing and will be used by the Council as a reference point in exercising its investigative and disciplinary functions under Part 5 of the Teaching Council Act, 2001, dealing with fitness to teach.

Professional misconduct by a registered teacher is defined in Section 41 of the Act in the following terms:

“(a) engaging in conduct which is contrary to a code of professional conduct established by the Council under section 7(2)(b);

(b) engaging in any improper conduct in his or her professional capacity or otherwise by reason of which he or she is unfit to teach.”

It is envisaged that the Council will exercise its powers in this respect when the requisite legal effect is given to Part 5 of the Teaching Council Act.

In respect of each individual complaint against a registered teacher, the Council, according to its procedures, will consider whether the conduct complained of amounts to a serious falling short on the part of the teacher, of the standards of teaching, knowledge, skill, competence and conduct that could reasonably be expected.

Existing nationally agreed procedures for dealing with difficulties and complaints at school level will continue to operate. The Council believes that, in most cases, these will offer the best means for resolving problems as they arise in the day-to-day operation of the education system.

Structure of the Code

Having regard to the three purposes set out above, the Code begins by setting out the ethical foundation for the teaching profession. This is encapsulated in the values of Respect, Care, Integrity and Trust that are reflected throughout the Code. These core values underpin the work of the teacher in the practice of his or her profession.

The Code then sets out the standards which are central to the practice of teaching and expected of registered teachers. The standards identify teachers’ professional responsibilities and are framed as statements under six separate headings: values and relationships; integrity; conduct; practice; professional development; collegiality and collaboration. The standards reflect the complexity and variety of teaching and serve to guide professional judgement and practice.

Context

The Code is in accord with the Council's Policy on the Continuum of Teacher Education which envisions the teacher as a reflective practitioner whose key role is to educate. It also sees teachers as members of professional learning communities and advocates a role for the profession in supporting student teachers and newly qualified teachers. The Code has also been developed in the context of the Council's future role in relation to continuing professional development.¹

In adopting and promoting the Code, the Teaching Council has particular regard for the broader context in which teaching takes place.

The Council is mindful of the rights of pupils/students, including their right to have a voice in matters affecting them.

The Council is also mindful of the rights of parents and the rights of teachers and of the responsibilities that accompany those rights. A valuable synergy has been developed between parents and teachers and this has great potential to benefit pupils/students and their education.

The Council recognises the civic and social value of education and the profound contribution that the teaching profession has made to the social, cultural and economic development of Ireland over many decades. It also recognises the key role of teacher educators in ensuring the quality of teaching. It believes that education, the teaching profession and the process of teacher education merit the active attention and support of the State and the community.

The Council is also conscious of the myriad factors beyond teachers' control which have a bearing on their work including:

- the engagement of parents and the wider community
- the commitment and engagement of pupils/students
- the availability of resources and supports
- opportunities for teachers' professional development
- the accelerated degree of educational change
- the pace of legislative change
- economic and societal factors.

The Council believes that the Code of Professional Conduct for Teachers provides an ethical foundation along with explicit standards of conduct to be observed at all times, having regard to the broader context set out above.

In conclusion, the Code of Professional Conduct for Teachers encapsulates the fundamental ethics that inform the work of teachers. The core values and professional standards that teachers subscribe to are expressed in terms that are accessible to educators and to all others with an interest in education. Since the education system reaches into virtually every home in the country, and affects so many so deeply, it is crucial that the teaching profession's value system and professional standards are clear and readily understandable.

The Teaching Council believes that the adoption of this Code of Professional Conduct for Teachers will enhance and deepen the confidence and trust that society places in teachers.
